

AT THE EXPOSITION.

FACTS AND INCIDENTS OF THE DAY NOTED.

The People Showing Their Great Interest in the Exposition by a Daily Growing Attendance—The Events of Yesterday Highlighted by Our Reporters—Notable Things to Occur.

Yesterday closed one of the most successful weeks that the exposition has known, but by no means, unless all signs are at fault, the most successful that will mark its career. While the crowd upon the grounds was not the largest of the season it was still sufficiently large to fill the buildings and show to the world the absorbing interest that is being taken in every detail of this phenomenal exposition.

Perhaps the most attractive show on the grounds yesterday was in Judges' hall where the floral ship and triumphal arch, the gifts of Cincinnati, were on exhibition. These were visited by throngs and were quite as highly admired as anything else on the grounds.

Below we condense the many things which came into the note books of our reporters:

Next Week's Excursions.

The outlook for next week's excursions is that there will be a much larger attendance than has ever yet been known upon the exposition grounds. From all quarters the information comes that the trains will be packed to the very utmost, and the passenger agents of every road are expending every effort to get passenger cars to bring the crowds. Mr. Wrenn, of the Western and Atlantic, has made arrangements for the usual weekly excursion that will leave Chattanooga next Tuesday. He will start two trains of eleven cars each, from Chattanooga, on that day, and an additional train of ten cars will be made up from Marietta and north Georgia and Cartersville and Van Wert roads, making in all over thirty cars that will arrive by this road on Tuesday, bringing over three thousand people. Telegrams were received from Mr. Smith, of the Rome road, stating that it would be impossible to accommodate the crowd of next Tuesday with the cars that had been allotted him, as Mr. Wrenn was unable to furnish a single additional car above which he had promised him. He telegraphed that the Rome excursion had better be postponed for a day. Mr. Smith replied that it was simply foolish to try to bring the crowd with the train of only three extra coaches, so that on next Wednesday a full train of ten coaches will be sent to Rome, and will come back packed with visitors.

These are but samples of the excursions from all quarters, and it hardly admits of a doubt that Atlanta will see, during the next week, such a crowd as has never been within her gates since she became a city.

The Coming Week.

WHAT WE WILL HAVE WITH US.

This week will be the greatest, in point of attendance, that the exposition managers have encountered, and our city will be brought, face to face with the question whether our accommodations of all sorts are adequate to the strain.

The week has been called college week, and invitations have been mailed to the principals of colleges and seminaries to bring their students here to enjoy the advantages the exposition affords for studying the manifold objects of interest that are on exhibition. Thursday will be both educational and manufacturers' day. As it is national thanksgiving, and consequently a holiday, it will give all our Atlanta citizens a chance to visit the great world's fair without losing a day's work and wages.

Other special events of the week will be as follows:

Monday—Maryland, Baltimore and Augusta day. A large excursion will leave Baltimore this evening and arrive in this city tomorrow morning. After visiting the exposition, the party will assemble in Judges' hall at 7 o'clock to enjoy the programme arranged by the Maryland exhibitors, with Director-General Kimball, which will be a welcome by Governor Colquhoun and a response by Governor Hamilton of Maryland. Mayor English will speak for the municipal authorities of Atlanta, and Mayor Latrobe of Baltimore will reply. Colonel R. P. Cole will greet the visitors in the name of the Maryland exhibitors, to which Mr. R. W. R. Rasm, of Baltimore, a vice-president of the exposition, will reply.

In the evening the Marylanders will be entertained at a banquet at the Exposition hotel, by their state exhibitors' association. A special train will leave the exposition station at eight o'clock sharp, or their accommodation. On Tuesday at 12 o'clock a concert in honor of the visitors will be given at Judges' hall, by Charles M. Stief and William Knabe, of Baltimore.

While August 21 is put down for Monday, the Augusta excursionists, we understand, will not reach here in time to visit the exposition on that day, but will be here in force and go out Tuesday.

Tuesday a large excursion will arrive from West Point and intermediate points. A large special excursion will also come from Chattanooga on that day.

Tuesday will also be Charlotte day, and a large excursion will arrive from that city.

Wednesday the National association of passenger agents will meet at the exposition. On that day, also, excursion parties will arrive from Cincinnati and Athens.

For-morrow excursion parties will start from St. Louis, Montgomery, Savannah and the Central railroad stations. There will be other excursions during the week.

A Feature of the Art Hall.

The past week has simply witnessed a succession of triumphs for McBride & Co., in the Art hall of the exposition.

One of the beauties of this display is that it is taken from the enormous stock carried by the house, and consequently presents new features every day. Within the past week they have received over a dozen cases of Japanese goods imported direct. These goods, if opened in New York in any of the most fashionable stores, would draw a continual crowd of on-lookers and variety and curios buyers. They were selected from this importation a large amount of goods sent to supplement their display at the exposition. Some such reinforcements as this are needed almost daily, because the sales of goods at the exposition are continuous and heavy. Visitors who examine the display of this sterling firm express surprise that they are in French and German factories in Japan, and represent the newest and best things of that country. They have a full line of the famous Belloc goods, most fragile and beautiful of chinaware, a rich line of Haviland's hand painted china, imported china from all quarters of the globe where it is made, painted or moulded in the most perfect forms and colors of the country from which it comes, and samples of the finest American china that can be found. They have a large assortment of pottery that simply baffles description.

No handsomer present could be given than one of the enormous and beautiful tete-tete tea sets on exhibition at McBride's. The statuettes both in marble, in clay, or in French and German ensembles in large and well selected, embracing copies of some of the most noted pieces in the world. One advantage in buying from this stock is that you have a selection from the whole stock of McBride & Co. in the city. If you find goods in the display at the exposition that you like you can visit the store in town get a much fuller selection than is offered at Art hall from the same line of goods. Having no extra expenses on account of the exposition, and the display made thereat, the McBrides are able to sell all their goods at the usual prices. They put on no tax for extra expenses, but rather are able owing to enormous sales, to cut the prices below the usual figure. No visitor should fail to see McBride & Co.'s display.

The East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Display.
Colonel E. W. Cole spent yesterday at the exposition grounds looking through the great show. He sought out the railroad building at an early hour and was met by Colonel J. B. Killebrew, who accompanied him through the buildings.

Colonel Cole was very much pleased at the handsome exhibition made by the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia lines, which is one of the best arranged and most interesting exhibits in the building. The largest specimens of coal, iron, and copper, rice and tropical productions are to be found in this exhibition, and the whole show is ornamented in the most tasteful and handsome manner. Colonel Cole complimented Colonel Killebrew upon the success of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia's exhibit, and thanked him for the taste and energy he had displayed in getting it up. Colonel Cole left the city last night for Nashville, where he goes for a few days of needed rest.

Exposition Police Points.

—The "exposition guard" had a busy week—not so much in looking after disorderly parties as in watching valuable exhibits.

—There is nothing startling in police circles at the exposition. All the differences have been properly adjusted between the admission department and the Atlanta police force, and no unkind feelings now exist.

—If Peter Daigner will call on L. P. Thomas, chief department of protection, it will be to his advantage.

—Mr. King Cannon, who was injured by an engine on the exposition grounds a few days ago, is improving.

—Two valuable walking canes lost on the exposition grounds and described furnished. Chief Thomas were both recovered in a few hours yesterday.

—Only one little skirmish on the grounds during the week. The parties will be held to answer.

—Four or five cases per day against parties for attempting to enter the exposition grounds without paying are made by the exposition guard.

—Two black silk parasols and two most beautiful, one pair silver-rimmed spectacles, and other articles in the hands of the chief department of protection can be had by the owners if they will call.

Fast Black.

After spending thousands of dollars, and after years of patient experimenting, the manufacturers of Clark's O. N. T. spool cotton made one of the most important discoveries ever made in the thread trade, namely: That of producing a fast black thread, or a black thread that will stand in any climate for any number of years without fading, spotting or rusting.

Nothing looks so bad as to see a lady's black garment with the seams in the back all faded and white after a few weeks' wear on account of the thread fading till it assumes the appearance of a dingy white thread instead of a black.

As this is a very important and vital matter to merchants, dressmakers and consumers, the thread generally, the manufacturers of O. N. T. would esteem it a special favor if they would make the following test on black threads:

Buy a spool of O. N. T. cotton in black in any number, and also buy a spool of any other black thread made, then take a lemon and cut it in two and saturate all the threads with the juice of the lemon, put the threads aside for a short time, then dry, and when they are dry, O. N. T. will be as jet black as ever, while all the other threads will lose their original black and appear as a faded brick color.

The O. N. T. black thread may be put into nitric acid, oxalic acid or any other acid and it will retain its original black, while all other makes of black threads undergoing the same process, will instantly become red and rusted when brought in contact with acids, thereby showing the great superiority of O. N. T. over all other brands of threads.

Pen Work.

In the east wing of Art hall is to be found some beautiful pen work executed by E. C. Critchton, a rising young artist of Atlanta. The exhibit consists of eight pieces, prominent among which we especially note the one that has Governor Colquhoun's picture as a centerpiece. The fine lettering in this piece is exquisite and shows Mr. Critchton to be quite skilled in the use of the pen.

The pen work is shown in the pictures of the stars, birds and swans, and also proves to the spectator that the artist who performed the work is of no ordinary merit. All visitors who are fond of viewing ornamental pen work should not fail to see Critchton's display.

Cause and Effect.

—What is the cause or the reason that induces everybody to make a bee-line for the O. N. T. exhibit?

—Long before the hour for starting their machinery, hundreds will surround the stand, and literally block up the aisles and sidewalks, waiting patiently for admission.

The manufacturers of Clark's O. N. T. spool cotton will try and explain the extraordinary attractions as briefly as possible.

In the first place the O. N. T. machinery is fifty years in advance of that in use by any other thread manufacturer, and is admitted to be such by all competitors.

In the second place this exhibit is purely and simply one of spool cotton. There are no sewing machines to be found here. There are no looms for making clothing here, and no paid auxiliaries of any kind is required here, such attractions being unnecessary. This is a display of spool cotton and spool cotton machinery, and not a display of looms and machinery that have no connection with the manufacture of threads.

It is, therefore, not to be wondered at that this celebrated thread should be so rapidly superseding every other brand of spool cotton in the American market, and for the reason that the manufacturers of Clark's O. N. T. strictly adhere to their legitimate business, and never dabble in the manufacture of anything outside of spool cotton, consequently the article they now offer to the public is as superior to all other threads as is their machinery on exhibition at Oglethorpe park.

The ladies of the south are very conservative and that is an admirable trait in their favor. They will reply in defense of the article they have been using that "my mother and my grandmother used it." Yes, that is very true, but had they only seen the revolutions that improved machinery has made and is making in the manufacture of every class of goods, they would have accepted the inevitable.

The manufacturers of Clark's O. N. T. spool cotton go upon the principle that there is nothing made today that cannot be improved upon, hence they are ever at work, modifying and improving their machinery, and, as a consequence, are daily improving the quality of this celebrated thread.

J. & P. Coats.

Our reporter taking notes a few days since, noted the signs at this display—for exhibition only—visitors welcomed, and asked the question, "Why do you make this elegant display and show such attention to your visitors. If you are not competing for a medal, in what is the object?" The answer was, "We have taken the highest medals at all the great world's fairs—London, Philadelphia, Vienna and Paris—and while we do not underestimate or lightly value the importance of the cotton exposition, we are making our exhibit in a section of the country where J. & P. Coats is the standard, never known to fail, and which is used as a comparison by all other manufacturers."

Ladies all speak of the ample accommodation for visitors, the uniform courteous treatment of all who call by the gentlemen in charge, and the little yellow sample bags they each contain the spool they like the best, always reliable.

A Letter Written With a Sewing Machine.

Yesterday the Wheeler & Wilson sewing machine company had a letter written to Mr. Edward Atkinson with one of their machines on a piece of homespun, made by the Willimantic company, being a part of the cloth out of which the shirt was made for Mr. Atkinson, it being the first letter ever written with a sewing machine. The letter is a curiosity, and will be a grand souvenir for him. The threads used in forming the words in this letter was spun by Senator Joseph E. Brown. We give a verbal translation of the letter:

EXPOSITION GROUNDS, ATLANTA, GA., November 18.—To Hon. Edward Atkinson, Boston, Mass.—Dear Sir: We take pleasure in addressing you in this manner, deeming it necessary to make some explanation relative to the making of shirt and necktie. We received the fabric from the Willimantic company at 11 o'clock, and completed the shirt in an hour and a half, making the entire shirt on our machines that are run by steam. As you are doubtless aware, the button holes and eyelets were made on the machines the same as those used in making the suits of clothes made for you. The ornamentation is made from the yarn spun by Hon. Joseph Brown.

We trust that the shirt may protect you from the chilly blizzards of Massachusetts. If you find it necessary to wear it, you will find it to be a most comfortable one, the heat, it being a beautiful day, the thermometer outside standing at sixty. We are pleased to inform you that the cotton exposition is to-day a complete success and crowded daily by the people who are thoroughly awakened over the grandest enterprise ever known in the history of the southern country. Very respectfully yours, WHEELER & WILSON MANUFACTURING COMPANY. By Moon.

The Florida Exhibit.

Another car load of goods arrived yesterday for the Florida exhibit, and others are on the way. Mr. D. S. Place is here now assisting Mr. Voyle, and the exhibit is in a fine condition. It is in a fine condition, and the building is always crowded.

"Reversible."

The right royal good soul,
Who sells clothing—but never at retail—
If you lend him your ear
He will make it appear
That he quite understands every detail!

With a smile, smooth and bland,
He will grasp your right hand
And discourse of "Reversible" coats
Till—"Don't be alarmed!"
By his eloquence charmed,
Your hearts will jump into your throats.

While you're looking about,
Full of dignified doubt,
And listening to R. F.'s rehearsal,
How his flag is unfurled
Through the civilized world,
Till his trade has become universal!

You will think—"on the whole"—
That this "Baltimore" Cole
Entertains such a deep detestation
For cheap, shoddy clothing
As amounts to a loathing,
Quite beyond our best powers of narration!

As a good story-teller,
He discounts "Sam Weller,"
And though unmistakably stout,
Makes his customers grin
With uproarious din
Till he puts their dyspepsia to rout!

It is thus our friend Cole,
The right jolly, good soul,
In a style that is quite unchangeable,
Will make you believe,
While he laughs in his sleeve,
That the best thing in coats is "Reversible!"

And he'll not let you off
Till you cry, hold, enough!
You may send me up several dozens,
Till you've thoroughly clothed
Myself, my betrothed,
My uncles, my aunts, and my cousins!

861 WRITTEN BY AN APPRECIATIVE FRIEND.

"Something New Under the Sun."

We notice that the popular clothing firm of A. O. M. & Co. have been made sole agents for Atlanta and vicinity for the sale of the patent reversible suits and overcoats which have been creating such a furore among visitors to Colonel R. F. Cole, at Art Hall. Go to their store, 37 Peachtree street, and they will show something in the way of clothing you never before saw. A suit of clothing, one side of which is a handsome sack and the other an elegantly fitting frock, both lined throughout with different colored lining and the suits themselves different colors. But, then, you can't understand how it is, so go to 37 and see.

The Male Cafe.

The cafe in the main building is one of the most popular affairs in connection with the exposition. It was established as a convenience for the public and to afford a place for securing to the people a cheap and substantial lunch.

It does this in the most excellent way, and is being popularized by the public. Everything about it is in a superior style and the service is capital. The lunches are served cold but with all necessary accompaniments.

To the visitors to the exposition the cafe is a great blessing and will be found always a pleasant place of resort.

Exposition Notes.

—And now for another good week.

—Round-trip tickets will be sold from Vicksburg, on December 4th, at $12 to delegates, visitors and others attending the planters and farmer's convention, which is to be held here commencing December 6th.

—Excursion tickets will be sold December 5th from Meridian at $9.

—The next one cent per mile excursion will leave Louisville, Kentucky, on the 26th.

—The Lucy Cobb institute, from Athens, will be here on the 26th.

—The mayor and city council of Chattanooga will arrive at the Exposition hotel Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. Mayor English will meet them.

—90 cents will purchase one of those beautiful gold bangle rings, from J. P. Stevens & Co., either at their place in Art hall, at the exposition, or at their store, 34 Whitehall street.

—The Mobile and Ohio railroad will sell excursion tickets to Atlanta from all stations on that line at one cent per mile December 1st.

—W. R. Power, general passenger agent Marietta and North Georgia railroad, telegraphs indications are favorable for a large crowd on Tuesday.

—If the weather is favorable Tuesday, not less than five hundred will come from Marietta. Round trip rates only fifty cents.

—A one cent per mile excursion from St. Louis leaves to-morrow.

—Sale of excursion tickets for Augusta day commences to-day and continues to-morrow. Round trip rate only $5.45.

—Next Thursday will be Children's day, and the park will be crowded with children. The exposition company did a wise act in opening the twenty-cent gate.

—The reception to the governor of Maryland will be a grand affair.

—The excursion from Rome Tuesday morning will be very largely added to at Cartersville and other stations.

—Stevens' watches "take the cake."

—The Mississippi press association are coming to the exposition fifty strong.

—The advertisements distributed yesterday by the Western and Atlantic, offering Sunday excursion tickets to Marietta for only fifty cents, created quite an interest amongst the exhibitors, and many will visit Kennesaw mountain. The train leaves Atlanta at 10:30 p.m. and returns at 8:15.

—The advertisement notices in the cotton edition of the New Orleans Times should be engaged at once. William Campbell, secretary to Colonel R. S. Pardee, manager press, press pavilion, or H.

H. Hinton, agent and correspondent of the Times, will make contracts. The edition will number a quarter million copies and be thoroughly distributed.

—The very popular Major George C. Conner will accompany the mayor and city council of Chattanooga to Atlanta on next Tuesday. The Mayor will be expected to make one of his appropriate speeches, which will be responded to by Major B. E. Conner.

—An excursion at one cent per mile will leave Cleveland, Ohio next week.

—The beautiful and artistic display made by J. P. Stevens & Co., attracts universal admiration.

—The Cincinnati people were amazed at the beauty of J. P. Stevens & Co.'s display. They said they did not know Atlanta had such a good house.

—From to-morrow the crowds will begin pouring into the city from all sections of the country.

—What inducements can the exhibition authorities offer to secure the attendance of the Atlanta merchants? The exhibitors would be delighted to meet them.

—The Florida building is visited daily by large crowds.

—It has been suggested that a day be designated for hotel proprietors and boarding houses keepers. Doubtless Mr. Kimball will designate immediately.

—At Jaccard's, in Art hall, may be seen solitary diamond car rings at $125, $150, $175, $200, $225, $250, $275, $300, $350, $400, $450, $500, $550, $600, $650, $700, $750, $800, $850, $900, $950, $1,000 and upwards.

In the lot is a very brilliant pair weighing nine karats, which will be sold at a great bargain.

—Nickel stem-winding watches at $4.50 are offered by J. P. Stevens & Co.

—The coronet at the exposition on next Thursday should attract tens of thousands of people, and doubtless will. Colleges from all sections of the country will be here.

—The exhibition is, without question, the grandest ever seen on this continent, and no one who has ever seen it fails to advise others to go.

—100 gold bangle rings were sold by J. P. Stevens & Co. yesterday.

—J. P. Stevens & Co.'s Atlanta made watches have secured a popularity equal to any watch made, and it is now impossible to supply the demand for them. Mr. Stevens will soon enlarge his factory.

—The Washburn & Moon wire fence making machine, in the east wing of the main building, continues to hold the crowd.

—In the agricultural annex is a little farming implement which is attracting great attention. It is a universal seed planter, which may be used for planting corn, cotton, small grain or garden seeds in drills or hills and for drilling guano or any fine fertilizers. This planter has a force feed and appears to be a decided improvement on those hitherto used.

—Mr. W. B. Cleves, of Atlanta, is the inventor.

—The first invoice of the miniature souvenir cotton bales has been sold so rapidly by the Jaccard jewelry company that they have telegraphed home for more, which will arrive Monday.

—A new supply of the Jaccard solid gold bangle finger rings promised for Monday. All sizes.

—One of the most interesting machines on the exposition grounds is a silk loom in operation from the factory of the Worthen-lyke manufacturing company of New Jersey. This machine is kept constantly in operation manufacturing silk handkerchiefs with a picture of the exposition grounds in the center.

—Parties who are dealing in agricultural implements, will do well to investigate the merits of Kemp's manure and cotton seed distributor, which is shown in constant use daily. The exhibitors will give it any test required. No competition. Hundreds of practical and scientific farmers and planters are witnessing its work daily, and pronounce it a decided success. One hundred of the machines will be sold during the exposition. Come and see for yourselves.

What the Papers Say.

Correspondence Richmond Dispatch.

Looking contemplatively upon this enormous hive of busy people, I ask the seer, who are to reap the first benefits of this exhibit of forces? He answers, "The people of the northern states. They have learned by the activities and competition of business to look at every new fact in its relations to trade. They see an opportunity as by intuition, and pounce upon it instinctively. Many new facts have been brought to light here. The people of the south ought to move past these with their Yankee friends at this era. It is to be feared they have too much of a conservative spirit. Nearly every man of them has a lurking sense of sovereignty which holds him aloof, and makes him reluctant to combine talent and capital and energy for the good of the many. When they learn to put together inadequate fragments, and consent to let the fittest be king in money enterprises, these fragments of strength will at once cohere and become the foundations of immense individual wealth and the riches of the nation. The revival and the secondary good of the mighty event now transpiring here will surely be ours, O southrons."

Aurora, Texas, News.

No pen can portray the grandeur of this great cotton exposition of the south. There the north meets the south and the south and north meet Europe, long since by ocean telegraph, and no person will be allowed to see such exhibitions of union—may they be so and so practically illustrated that we stand appalled to think that a few years ago blood, and blood of the bravest, crimsoned the fields of each other's prowess. Now what will the result of this grand exhibition be? Will the north still claim, as a general thing, that the south is drained in ignorance, or that the stigma of slavery (so-called) is still hanging over her spell-bound, or will she say of the south, that she is a land of progress, of genius of the south, in her grand display of agricultural products and her hearty shake of the hand is as true to her word of good faith as she was to her patriotic honor when she contested every foot of her birthright by the sword. We glory in such exhibitions of union—may they be so repeated—and may every one who has the good fortune to visit the grand commercial and social union, return home a better citizen of the great republic he individually represents.

Correspondence N. Y. World.

What is necessary to get all the profits from the cotton plant is, first of all, mechanical skill in the south. The great cry for capital must be made to induce a cry for engineers and mechanics of all kinds. In this matter, also, the exposition will bring good results. On December 6th the National planters' association will meet here, and on the same day a large delegation of New England manufacturers will be present to consult with them about the methods of baling and handling cotton. The northern mills will send many of their master mechanics to study the situation, and they will give an impulse to the desire that is now generally expressed for such a class here. These meetings will be the most important probably during the whole exposition, because they have a more definite object in view than most others. The Cotton Manufacturers' association is called to meet in Boston November 20 to send delegates to the meeting to be held here December 6. Immediately after that date several important kinds of experiments will be made, particularly of gins, presses and other machines that have to do with cotton. It has been recommended that a final competitive trial of gins, saw and roller be made in December, 1882, in the building of the New England manufacturers and mechanics' institute in Boston.

The gin is the machine upon which the quality and the price of cotton depends more than upon any other. The planter will learn by that time that there is difference between a good gin and a bad one. The problem is to have a roller gin that has the capacity of a saw gin. One outcome of the exposition may be a solution of the difficulties caused by bad gins, bad presses and careless handling that is not complimentary to the planters. Several New England manufacturers are considering the feasibility of establishing headquarters in the cotton states where they can get the cotton directly from the field and gin, press and bale it themselves. If this has to be done to secure clean and properly assorted cotton, as humiliating as it will be to the planter, it will be his own fault. If such a movement were to become general it would lead ultimately to the buying of large southern plantations by northern manufacturers and cotton companies which would, as far as it extended, be a system of mercantile control to the system of small land holders that the southern people are anxious to establish.

PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER.

Rheumatism Neuralgia

Sprains, Pain in the Back and Side.

There is nothing more painful than these diseases; but the pain can be removed and the disease cured by use of PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER. This remedy is not a cheap Benzine Petroleum product that must be kept away from fire or heat to avoid danger of explosion, nor is it an untried experiment that may do more harm than good.

PAIN KILLER has been in constant use for forty years, and the universal testimony from all parts of the world is, IT NEVER FAILS. It not only effects a permanent cure, but it relieves pain almost instantaneously. Being a purely vegetable remedy, it is safe in the hands of the most delicate and infirm.

The record of cures by the use of PAIN KILLER would fill volumes. The following extracts from letters received show what those who have tried it think:

NEW YORK, November 19.—The cotton market opened extremely irregular and was feverish and unsettled in early dealings. At the first hour a heavy pressure toward lower prices was developed, under the influence of which the entire list revealed a sharp decline. Midday, however, the market was selling off 100 per cent. Perils, Decatur and Evansville 15, Texas Pacific 15, Metropolitan elevated 15, Cleveland Central Pacific, Chicago and North Western, Cleveland, Denver and El Paso, Manhattan elevated and Norfolk and Western preferred each 1 percent.

NEW YORK, November 19.—Stocks feverish and unsettled. Money 6 per annum and 1-64 per cent. Exchange—Long $4.80; short $4.81. Government dull and nominal. State Bonds unchanged, except registered 4s, which are 1/4 per cent lower.

THE COTTON MARKET.
CONSTITUTION OFFICE,
Atlanta, November 19, 1881.

New York.—The cotton market continued steady and without much change during the morning, but toward noon the time became up and an upward movement of quotations followed. In the afternoon and toward the close the market showed considerable firmness and we are able to note an advance for the day of about 84 1/2 points. The weak condition of the market yesterday seems to have been the result of bank failures in Boston, but the effects are only temporary, and a general improvement in the market is now predicted. The spot market is firm, and an advance of 1-16 is reported to-day; middling 12c.

Net receipts to-day 30,369 bales, against 28,335 bales last year; exports 10,347 bales; last year 11,701 bales; stock 85,887 bales, against 85,887 bales last year.

Below we give the opening and closing quotations of cotton futures to-day:

THE CONSTITUTION, Atlanta, Ga.

ATLANTA, GA., NOVEMBER 20, 1881.

DEACON RICHARD SMITH, of the Cincinnati Gazette, is with us again. He will attend the Central Presbyterian church this morning.

The death of George Law, at an advanced age, recalls the days before the war, when he was a famous merchant and business man, with a presidential bid inside his bonnet.

COMMISSIONER HENDERSON's quarterly report shows that the cotton crop of the state will not, when compared with the preceding crop, exceed 71 per cent. The corn crop is rated at 84 per cent.

STOCK-GAMBLING has brought to ruin another national bank—this time in Boston. The speculative craze that, turns the head of people in every town in the country's scope in now and then a victim from the national banks.

ATLANTA'S COTTON RECEIPTS. It is a tribute to the energy of Atlanta's merchants and the position of the city as a central market that she has held her cotton receipts of this year up to last year's figures.

Augusta is about 30,000 bales behind, Rome is about 12,000 bales behind, and Savannah is about 80,000 bales behind. Atlanta alone of all the cities whose reports are available, has kept up her figures to last year's pitch. If, as is expected now, the Georgia Pacific is finished to Douglasville, and the two coal roads are in operation, by next February, we may expect considerable cotton from along these roads—and a new territory for Atlanta. The secret of our high receipts this season is that we are occupying new fields, and deriving trade from new sections.

The crop is undoubtedly short, and he gain in our receipts over the percentage of loss in the crop represents Atlanta's real gain in the cotton trade for the season.

THE EXPOSITION AND ITS FUTURE. At last the success of the exposition is assured beyond doubt.

The crowds in attendance during the week that closed last night were more than twice as large as put by the estimates of the executive committee before the week opened. The crowds for the opening week will be much larger, as the information from every point agrees that the limit will simply be the capacity of the trains, and the power of the engines. There is every probability that the crowds will grow steadily until the close of the exposition, and equal the first estimates made by the managers of the exposition.

A similar show to our exposition, in scope, completeness or interest, we cannot hope to see aggregated in the south again in the next decade. It was pitiable, therefore, to think that it would be dissolved before the people for whose benefit it was intended, had seen it. We welcome the crowds of visitors, therefore, with the confidence of a man who knows that he has a good thing, and is anxious to show it.

CITY REGISTRATION. We call the attention of our readers to the importance of registering at the city hall, so as to vote at the municipal election in December. The opportunity to register closes with this month, and we are informed by officers of the city government that not more than one in six of our citizens have registered.

We hope the people of this city will not let this election go by default. It is true we have no mayor's election, but half of our city council is to be elected, and those elected remain in office for two years. No one has any right to complain at the action of the council unless he uses his influence to elect a suitable board. It is just as important to have good men in our city government as it is to have them in the highest offices in the land. Atlanta is a growing city. We need good men in the council, and if the people are not willing to interest themselves for their own good in this election, it is a duty they owe to the mayor, and those members of the council who hold over to register their names and help elect the best men for aldermen and councilmen. If there is any man who has not registered, we hope he will not postpone it a day but go and attend to it at once. We have no interest in any candidate before the people. Any one can run, and if the people fail to vote and let the election go by default, they can blame no one but themselves.

A DEFENSE OF THE ROBIN.

We have often wondered why the robin does not find it convenient to follow the example of the mocking bird and remain with us during the winter. He would be a fit companion for the thrush, the cat bird, the jay and the song sparrow. Occasionally a pair will make their home among the old-field pines and raise a brood, but as a general thing, they are never seen until the China berries shine forth as bladders in token of maturity. The reason for this we have just discovered. The robin is misunderstood and slandered. Some one writing to a New York sporting paper from Jefferson county, in this state, charges this modest bird with being a China berry thief. He says that droves of robins go from China tree to China tree, eat the intoxicating fruit, and remain on a spree as long as the fruit lasts. The correspondent avers, moreover, that the China berry contains alcohol and that this affects the birds to such an extent that some of them fall to the ground in a state of beastly intoxication.

With all due respect for the aforesaid correspondent, we deem it our duty to demolish this slanderous myth. It is, indeed, nothing more than a school-boy's dream, and it is worthy only a school-boy's dream. It has long been a legend among the young people that robins get drunk after eating China berries, and it is not to be denied that the actions of the birds themselves lend color to the supposition; but observation has convinced us that the antics of the robins are the result of suffocation and not intoxication. The conformation of the bird's neck is such that food must pass directly across the wind-pipe to reach its destination, and, in the case of a China berry, this journey is rather troublesome to the bird. The berry lodges against the wind-pipe and the attempts to swallow it result in suffocation. It is then the bird falls from the tree and its efforts to swallow the berry have the appearance of drunkenness. Generally the bird recovers, but sometimes it is choked to death. Upon several occasions the writer hereof has relieved the suffocated birds by merely pressing the berry past the wind-pipe, and their recovery was almost instant.

We allude to this grave matter here because a number of our exchanges have reproduced the original slander, and it distresses us to see the character and good name of an innocent bird bandied about in the columns of an irresponsible press.

A QUESTION OF COMPETITION. The Memphis Appeal does not think it is the Louisville and Nashville road that is trying to break Colonel Cole's lease of the Memphis and Charleston road.

The Courier-Journal says, and we presume in this special case (a dangerous presumption usually) it knows what it is talking about, that "the Louisville and Nashville has scooped Colonel Cole once more." It says that Mr. Victor Newcomb heads the pool, and that this latest capture is scarcely less important than the capture of the Nashville and Chattanooga. These are the assertions of the friend of the Louisville and Nashville road—the dapper that is supposed to be in the confidence of the managers of that road.

We all know what the "capture" of the Nashville and Chattanooga meant to the south. It meant the paralysis of a second great competing line from the west to the South-Atlantic. It meant the bottling of a great system, and the stoppage of the building of new and important links. It meant practical monopoly.

Colonel Cole has patiently organized a new system with essentially the same objects, and vastly wider opportunity than, the system out of which he was thrown. This is a new attempt, if the Courier-Journal knows what it is talking about, to break him down again, and with him break down competition. If the Memphis and Charleston passes into the hands of the Louisville and Nashville, we agree with our Louisville contemporary that it is "a capture of scarcely less importance than the capture of the Nashville and Chattanooga."

How much would the people of Nashville have given—how much would they give now—to revoke the capture of the Nashville and Chattanooga? Not half as much as the people of Memphis could afford to give to prevent a similar capture of the Memphis and Charleston?

But whether it is the Louisville and Nashville that is trying to break the lease—or a crowd of Colonel Cole's enemies seeking to destroy him—or speculators working for a rise—or stockholders honestly but mistakenly seeking a change, it would be a sad day for the south when the attempt succeeded. We have always maintained that the only safeguard of the people against the great railroad corporations is in equally strong corporations competing for the same business. Competition will do more to regulate corporations and prevent monopoly than all the laws that can be passed. It will not be denied by any one who looks at the map that the Cole system offers the best hope for full and comprehensive competition with the Louisville and Nashville system. Whatever tends to weaken the Cole system, therefore, tends just that much the hope of efficient and perfect competition.

AVERY'S HISTORY OF GEORGIA.

The History of the State of Georgia from 1530 to 1880. Embracing the Three Important Epochs: The Decade Before the War of 1861; The War; The Period of Reconstruction. With the Portraits of the Leading Public Men of this Era. By L. W. Avery. Complete in One Volume. New York: Brown & Derby, Publishers, 21 Park Place.

An advance copy of this book, which has reached us through the courtesy of the author, shows it to be an elegantly bound and beautifully printed volume of 715 pages, profusely illustrated with portraits on steel and in photogravure of the men who have been most active in making the history of Georgia in politics, literature and journalism. Colonel Avery does not employ the word "History" upon his title-page to convey the idea that he has made a series of studies, or that he has written an essay based upon certain historical events. His book is a narrative of events, painstaking, but always rapid, vivid, picturesque and brilliant. He has made a cavalry charge (so to say) into the dusty camp of the past and rescued certain facts of importance; and these he has arranged in a narrative of thrilling interest, grouping them in a luminous historical picture that must attract the attention not only of the people of Georgia, but of all who would have a clear view of the contest that culminated in secession, and the struggle that ensued over the attempt at reconstruction. The fact that the volume is a narrative told with great candor and bearing the impress of a strong and persistent individuality certainly adds to its popular interest of the volume; but it is to be regretted that Colonel Avery, while he had all the materials at hand, did not make a leisurely study of some of the events bearing not altogether remotely upon the surrender at Appomattox. The author has a gift of keen analysis—as the older readers of THE CONSTITUTION have reason to know—and it would have been employed to good purpose in the direction of our suggestion. To what extent did the imperialism manifested at Richmond, and giving rise to the repeated protests of Governor Brown, bear away the patriotism of the people? A careful review of the manifold outcroppings of the situation—the effect of the conscription and impressment acts—would cover a field that must interest every thoughtful student of the history of that period; and while it would perhaps have marred somewhat the scope and purpose of Colonel Avery's book, we must repeat our regrets that he did not undertake it.

Naturally a large portion of the volume is devoted to the history of ex-Governor Joseph E. Brown. We say naturally, because the history of the period of which Colonel Avery writes, and the biography of ex-Governor Brown are one and the same. No biography of Joe Brown could be written that would not also be, in one sense, a political history of Georgia, and no political history of Georgia could be written that would not, in a large measure, be a biography of Joe Brown. In peace, in war, in reconstruction, in pacification, he stands out the most remarkable man the state has ever produced. From beginning to end his career shows what the genius and integrity of common sense may accomplish.

Colonel Avery has contented himself with chronicling events and pointing out their relations to the men who moulded or were moulded by them; but to accomplish this easily, gracefully, successfully, is a result few men could accomplish. Given the zeal, there must be patience of an extraordinary kind; and to zeal and extraordinary patience must be added tact, discrimination, a familiarity with men, events and results, and a faculty for arranging a permanent perspective to fit the eyes and minds of a multitude of people whose relations to the facts detailed by Colonel Avery place them in the attitude of critics. In this view, the task that the author set himself to do has been faithfully performed, and the result is a monument to his patience and skill. He has performed a great work for Georgia. He has prepared a narrative of unsurpassed interest for the general reader, and spread a feast for the historical student. We are glad to know, and our readers will be glad to know, that the pecuniary success of the work is assured beyond peradventure. Thousands of copies were ordered in advance of publication, and now that the agents of the publishers will be able to show the book complete, we have no doubt that copies thereof will find their way into every family in Georgia where love for the good old commonwealth has its abiding place.

We call attention to the bright and interesting page of advertisements classed under "for sale," "lost," "wanted," "for rent," "board," etc. This page is a map of the wants and desires of this great city and is truly "a map of busy life." There are many lessons of interest to be drawn from a study of these three line advertisements.

THERE is a good deal of senseless criticism in various quarters in regard to the recent visit of General Sherman to the exposition. It would be interesting to know just how many of these inflated critics endeavored to prevent Sherman's visit in 1861. The inflated critics appear to be angrier now than they were then.

We hasten to inform the inflated critics that General Sherman was very quiet and composed during his visit to Atlanta the other day. There was a time, however, when General Sherman was a little less composed during a visit to Atlanta, but at that time the inflated critics were farther from the front than they are now.

Is there no out-of-the-way office in which Private Dabell can be stowed away while he edits his correspondence with our modern statesmen?

With Grant, Logan and Cameron to distribute the federal patronage, there is now reason why Mr. George William Curtis should get his bellyful of civil service reform during the next three years.

GRANT is having just as much fun as if he had been elected to a third term. And, for the matter of that, the 366 are still solid.

THE New York Tribune lightly (and somewhat evasively, it must be admitted) identifies the nice new administration with the third term program. We shall begin to believe after awhile that our esteemed contemporary employs a probelet.

THE Hon. Montgomery Blair, who wears the faded flower of freedom on his bosom, says that the defeat of the Virginia "bourbons" by Mahone is a good thing for the "national democracy." We have not kept up with politics of late, but our recollection is that the national democracy consists wholly of Blanton Duncan, Montgomery Blair, Sam Randall and Mr. Bayard. If we are wrong, the Hon. Blair can write another card and make the necessary correction.

We infer that Miss Sally Bernhard has had the experience of a St. Louis editor. She distinctly alluded to a desire to smash somebody's head.

MR. BLAINE makes an excellent witness in the Guitau case. Mr. Arthur should be called for the defense.

WHATVER else may be said of Guitau, it must be admitted that he is the most accomplished republican politician ever seen in this country. He arranged a programme which had for its purpose the success of Grantism, and he carried it out most effectively. Can the nice new administration afford to desert its benefactor?

PRIVATELY, Sir William Moore, of the Augusta News, is very proud of the fact that General Sherman visited the exposition, but in public he gnashes his teeth and fires his pistol passing vehicles every time he thinks about it. If Sir William will place himself at the head of the inflated critics and visit the exposition as quietly as Sherman did, he will accomplish a good deal for his country.

THE Washington correspondent of the New York Herald shows that Captain Willard Glazier, of Hartford, Connecticut, used the word "steward" in his account of the battle of Fredericksburg. This is amusing. The word is as old as the Saxon tongue. Mr. Blaine merely gave it a political application.

When a republican announces that he is a reformer the time has come for the police to take him in hand.

A REPUBLICAN contemporary, alluding to Grant's attack on Blaine says "there was once a man who fought a duel with a wind-mill." After turning this remark around and viewing it from different standpoints we find it impossible to discover its intent. Why should a republican paper oppose to the third term compact Statesman Blaine to a wind-mill?

THERE is one fact that ought to reconcile Sir William Moore, of Augusta, to Sherman's visit to Atlanta. The morning after his arrival, the general went up Marietta street and stood around in front of a drug-store.

THE Springfield Republican alludes pleasantly to the attitude and tone of the southern press in regard to the outrages committed by members of the Ninth Massachusetts; and it is not to be denied that this attitude is in decided contrast to that of the leading northern papers which have persistently held the whole people of the south responsible for outrages of every sort committed anywhere from the boundary of Mexico to the Potomac.

The harmony in the republican party just at present is very promising, and General Grant is contributing his quota by pursuing Blaine republicans with a very large war club.

A STALWART administration is bound to make some sort of provision for Gorham. That much is settled.

MR. H. V. REEFIELD, a well-known journalist, died in Washington, Thursday night, of consumption. Mr. Redfield was well known in the south as the correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial. He was a republican, but no shadow of partisan bias ever made its appearance in his letters towards promoting a better understanding between the sections. Mr. Redfield had a style all his own, and was thoroughly equipped for whatever work he took in hand. Personally, he was modest, genial and companionable.

MR. SAMUEL BOWLES received his first promotion at Savannah, the News giving him the title of colonel. In the hullo-balloo and hurly-burly of the exposition, THE CONSTITUTION somewhat neglected its duty. Should Colonel Bowles make it convenient to renew his visit, we hope to make things even.

THE members of the "pool" in Memphis and Charleston may have gained a victory at the late meeting in Huntsville, but it is a very sad victory that causes a drop of nineteen points in three days in the stock.

COLONEL C. W. WOOLLEY, of Cincinnati, one of the most influential and certainly one of the wisest of western democrats is in the city for a few days. Colonel Woolley is, of course, delighted with what he has seen.

We believe Deacon Richard Smith has never seen a Sabbath in Atlanta. The knowledge that this truly good man is in the city this morning, plausibly observing our Sunday methods, should throw an extra shade of calmness over the day. Let no ribald shout break upon the solemn stillness and remind the deacon of his wicked partners.

IT appears this morning that the sunny south is worn out with its efforts to keep balmy and has determined to let winter do its worst. When the south gives up in this way something has got to freeze.

DEACON RICHARD SMITH's passion for Atlanta amounts to infatuation. He is here again, and here more wholly this time than before. He has Atlanta with a beating in his heart. Well—while the lamp holds out to burn, and the etc, etc, may return. Here is the top of the morning to you, deacon.

COLONEL COLE'S enemies in New York declare that he is "not much of a railroad man," and yet they think it worth while to make a seven million dollar pool every once in awhile, and attempt to disarrange his plans. If he "doesn't amount to much," why don't they let him alone? It's a dangerous thing to send money after revenue.

PERSONAL.

WOLFE's full vote in Pennsylvania is said to have been 9,437.

GITTEAU missed his profession. He should have been a circus clown.

ONE of Governor Foster's daughters, it is said, is to marry his private secretary, Mr. Mussey.

CHESTER A. ARTHUR, JR., is naturally a favorite in New York society. He is two years younger than his father, President Arthur.

JOHN WALTER's visit to America did more to injure the reputation of his paper, the London Times, than ten years of good journalism can redress.

IT is rumored that Mr. Arthur Sullivan, the popular author of "Patience," the "Pirates of Penzance," and other operatic comedies, is about to be knighted.

GOVERNOR STANFORD, of California, has returned from France with his own portrait painted by Meisner, his wife's painted by Bonnat, and his seal by Bonnat.

LEDDY, remember him? Well, he is going into the grocery business in Baltimore. He will have a fine opportunity to judge of the value of his American grown tea.

MR. HENRY S. RAYKIN, secretary and treasurer of the Rankin knitting company, Cohok, N. Y., has been a visitor to the city and the exposition, and was greatly delighted with both.

GEORGE REMINGTON, of Suffield, had his leg badly broken by a barrel of elder falling upon it on Saturday. This shows that elder should only be used for medicinal purposes.

SENATOR BECK, of Kentucky, Senator Farley, of California, and Senator Mahone, of Virginia, are with their families, occupying apartments in a fashionable building in Washington called the "Portland."

THOMAS C. BAKER, whose estate was settled in San Francisco, two years ago, on what was regarded as a doubtful proof that he had been dead for eight years previous, has turned up in the city, and is making it very lively for the ex-administrator.

THE Rev. Dr. John Hall, of New York, leaped from a street car when it was in motion on Sunday night, and fell upon his face. His nose was broken and an ugly gash was made under one of his eyes. He will be confined to his house for two weeks or more.

MESSRS. JAMES IRVING, president, and Thomas L. Leiper, treasurer, of the Irving & Leiper cotton yarn manufacturing company, at Chester, Penn., reached the city last evening. They came to visit the exposition and will doubtless find the fair pleasant and profitable.

The splendid exhibit made by Commissioner Henderson of Georgia products and on view in the galleries of the main building has not had our full notice. It will be referred to in the terms of the length it deserves in Tuesday's issue. The pressure on our columns this morning makes this delay necessary.

SENIATOR MCPHERSON, of New Jersey, said to "Gath": "I have sold out my patents in the Menery Palace cars, which are to bring live stock east. I received $100,000 for the car rights, which I personally patented, to bring on cattle, water them, feed them, etc., and am now attending to my farming interests. I have a large tract of land on the Round Brook railroad. There I indulge myself in farming, which I was brought up to do."

IN GENERAL.

PAWTECK, R. J., makes about 1,000,000 pounds of yarn per month.

THE fund for the Garfield professorship at Williams college has now reached $700,000.

THE new Massachusetts legislature will include at least nine physicians—four from Boston.

THE budget of the German empire shows a deficit of $8,500,000. So much for "Bizzy's" finance.

HIXMOO girls are taught to think of marriage as soon as they can talk. This makes them smarter than American girls by about two years.

THERE are 800,000 men employed in the railroad business in this country. Is it any wonder that the girl of the period haunts the railway stations?

"On the perils of the deep!" exclaims the traveler as he reaches the shore. When he sees his trunk in the hands of the luggage annihilator, he changes his cry to "the perils of the depot!"—Boston Transcript.

It will cost $740,000 to insulate the national library of Paris. The work is expected to be completed by next summer, and the danger to the library will be proportionately lessened. The British Museum is entirely insulated.

THE ceramics, like the pictures in the Fales sale in New York, are bringing fair but not remarkable prices. The auction has worked along through the Chinese and Chinese wares, and has brought in, in all, about $48,000. The punch set from the Paris exposition, figured in the catalogue, brought $12.

A NEW party has arisen in some of the Swiss cantons which calls itself the Winterthurer-und-Weberknechtenspartei. It is not every day that we hear of a party so simple and so exhaustive as the German. Here, in a single word, these people tell us that they are immigrants from the Swiss cantons. The predictability of the scheme will probably not be decided upon before party.

We flit through the dreamy hours of summer like swift winged humbees amid the honeysuckle and pumpkin blossoms, storing away per haps a little glucose honey and buckwheat cakes for the future, and at all once, like a newspaper thief in the night, the king of frost and ripe, mellow chubbliness is upon us, and we crouch beneath the wintry blast and hump our spinal column up into the crisp air like a Texas steer that has thoughtlessly swallowed a raw cattle—Lancaster City Boomerang.

A POEM AND ITS ANSWER.

In last Sunday's CONSTITUTION we printed a poem entitled, "A Psalm of Life," written by a gentleman now in this city. The author received, a day or two since, the following letter, written on a sheet of mourning paper:

M—A, November 13, 1881—Lorenz Tevöl: Thank you for the "psalm of life," but where do you get your belief? I reach out to grasp all knowledge that gives hope. I cannot accept as knowledge mere assertion, no matter what its age and source. If a word from you can help me to know you and what you are I do not know. If you reply, please do not put me to sleep with generalities. I want a reason for the faith that is in you, and I want to hold that faith myself, if it be not presumption. To me the only reason not disproved, or at least unshaken, for believing is, our yearning—and that may be man's vanity—his feeling that God owes him more than this life.

Truly yours,
P. S.—I read your names reversed. I thought you were a man, but it does not matter to me. You are only the writer of word which may help me.

The following poem is submitted as an answer to the letter:

WHAT IS TRUTH.

Our lives are like kaleidoscopes
Whose broken bits of colored glass—
Revolving—flash its fears and hopes,
As they in swift succession pass!

But ah! it seems to us so strange
That we've been baffled all these years,
In our best efforts to arrange
A life superior to its fears!

And there, then, no standing place—
No foothold on the solid rock?
Where—with a calm, uplifted face—
We can withstand life's fiercest shock?

No covert for the storm-tossed soul—
No shelter from life's blazing sun?
No calm retreat—unreachable—cool—
Where in self defense may run?

I listen—with an upturned eye—
Expectant—and throbbing pulse!
Till my wraith soul, deliciously
In this response of "Truth" exults!

The soul—progressive—spurs the soul—
And claims affinity with God!
Who, from superincumbent skies
Reveals himself to him who tries.

Avoid the "rough and tumble" strife
Of the world, and its cruel, cruel, cruel
His sensual cravings to deny,
And live his life unselfishly!

Who, knowingly, will never slight
A neighbor's inalienable right;
But rather strain a point to bless
Or help a neighbor in distress!

On such a soul the Father smiles
And guards him 'mid temptation's wiles;
And not a single whispered prayer
Breathed by a soul in its despair.

But vibrates in its tenderest tone
The cry, through God's infinite telephone!
Then to the ear's expectant dream,
These answering utterances come:

Cease your despair—dry every tear—
A loving Father's always near,
And with your feeble steps sustain
Through every weary path of pain!

And when the inevitable death
Shall—with his sorpitic breath—
Your sinking, sensuous nature steep
In an everlasting sleep.

Then, shall the soul exultant sing,
And soar aloft on freedom's wing:
And—basking in the smile of God—
Forget earth's disciplinary rod!

LORENZ TEVÖL.

Now that the exposition is an assured success, thousands of visitors are daily flocking to see the wonders there displayed, and nearly every one comes away pleased. Our visitors are amusing themselves in other ways, too. Many arrive here in carriages driven over the city, viewing the many handsome residences to be seen on the different streets, but the largest portion of them flock to Dougherty's big dry goods store, on Peachtree street, for it is the most attractive place in the city.

Every day thousands of customers crowd around the counters, admiring the display of beautiful goods. The store is crowded all the time, and yet every one is welcomed and waited on and showed around as nicely and as pleasantly as though there was no rush at all. Certainly Mr. Dougherty has the dry goods trade down to a "fine point," and no wonder for he has the prettiest goods and more of them than have ever before been in any store in Atlanta, and the most attractive clerks to show them.

"The madam" has been there, and she says Mr. Dougherty's prices can't be beat south of New York, and she ought to know, for she has had enough experience buying dry goods. Lord knows! But any of the children, or the cook, can buy shoes for as cheap as she can with all her experience. For Mr. Dougherty has one price for all, and that price is always the cheapest in town.

More—For dry goods and shoes, at bottom prices, see the dry goods store, 39 and 41 Peachtree street, Atlanta, Georgia.

A Handsome Display.

We have frequently had occasion to refer to the fine stock of goods kept by our Atlanta merchants generally, and the folly of our people in sending to northern cities for their goods. We have recently passed through the immense warehouses of P. H. Hook, the largest furniture dealer in the city, and we were completely astonished, both at the magnitude and quality of his assortment, and we regretted that the great crowd of people in the north and west cannot either in costliness or completeness his selections of parlor, chamber, office and dining room furniture. Some of the furniture manufactured expressly for the exposition with the exquisite silk and satin gold lacred and lacred banniers are marvelous articles of workmanship. The goods are an exposition in themselves and should have had a conspicuous place in the main building.

Hundreds of strangers visit his beautiful rooms daily and always find ready and agreeable salesmen, and they are not alone in the store. His annual sales run into the hundreds of thousands, and still every month shows an increase on the previous one. His methods are simple and purely original. One thing you can rely on, he never effects a sale by running down his competitors' goods. On the contrary, he will in all probability give you his figures and tell you to do better if you can, only giving him the preference, all things being equal. We can only say in conclusion, do not fail to go and see Snook's lovely display at his store, 7 and 9 Marietta street.

THE SAW OF THE PERIOD.

An Exhibit: Whose Merits Command Wide-Spread Attention.

In passing through the vast wing of the main building yesterday we were pleased to note the presence there of Mr. Daniel Simonds, the superintendent of the Simonds manufacturing company, of Fitchburg, Massachusetts. Mr. Simonds has the pleasure, in company with all the visitors to the exposition, of seeing his company represented therein by one of the handsomest and completest exhibits in the building. The circular saws and planing machine knives of the Simonds manufacturing company enjoy so great a reputation wherever they are known, particularly so in the south, that the absence of an exhibit from the company would have been a recognized calamity. As it is, they have arranged as tasteful and attractive an exhibit as we ever saw composed of similar materials. It is so situated as to catch the eye of every itinerant in the exposition, and the articles are so placed as to make the display effective and engaging.

There is no establishment in the world that has so achieved and deserved reputation in the south for its wares as the "Simonds," and it was fitting that they should have had an exhibition what the public are pleased to pronounce the best exhibit of its kind on the grounds. The character of the materials used in the manufacture of their saws, the scientific and skillful na manipulations by which they are brought to their form, temper and general excellence, all combine to render them far in excellence the approved saws of the period. In whatever form a saw may be needed the Simonds manufacturing company is able to supply it and to furnish the most absolute guarantees of excellence in every quality that is desirable. We cordially welcome their superb display and commend it to the attention and study of every visitor to the exposition.

HANVEY.—The relatives and friends of Major George M. Hanvey, and of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Dunning, are respectfully invited to attend the funeral of Mr. Duffy Hanvey, at the residence of Major Hanvey, 85 East Hunter street, this afternoon, at 4 o'clock.

McGHEE.—The friends and acquaintances of the late S. L. McGhee and of Mrs. A. M. Wynn and J. W. Phillips are invited to attend the funeral services to be held at the residence of Mrs. Wynn, 402 Decatur street, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

IN MEMORIAM.

Our tears are fresh over the new made grave of our little companion, Bertha Caldwell, lately so full of health and brightness; so kind and affectionate.

We grieve with the desolate parents, whose early hopes all centered on the happy and brilliant future of this gifted child; and whose home is now sad and dreary without the sound of her dear voice. Remember that your loss is now her gain, and that, safe in the arms of her Heavenly Father, her voice now joins the carols of angels in His praise.

Her memory is like her young life, "pure as the snow."

She was for five years one of the most devoted scholars of St. Philip's Sunday school, and showed her Christianity by her example. Her pastor said, her that hers was the most lovely character he ever knew.

Soon will these sad years of separation pass away, when you must strive to meet your beloved one in the realms above.

NEW YORK NOTES.

THE SENSATION OF THE WEEK IN THE CITY.

How Raymond Relates the Gossip, and Tells Us of the Plays on the Boards of the Theatre, a Marriage in High Life, and Other Interesting Events—Personal Items, Etc.

Special Correspondence Constitution.

New York, November 18, 1881. — The weather this week has not been seasonable. Instead of chill November winds, the balmy breezes of autumn have prevailed. Nature has caught on again with a second grip. The trees are beginning to bud, the grass has become green in the parks, and the phenomenon of spring weather at the wrong end of the winter is presented. The result is sickness among all classes of people and an interference more or less marked with every movement of trade, society and the people's affairs. Meanwhile the world turns round, the rent day comes, the street cars go up and down, James Gordon Bennett goes to Europe, and the interest over election is subsiding. Patti continues to sing to empty benches, a few people think it worth while to get married, a man invents a new kind of steamboat, Italy's new play, The Passing Regiment, proves a success. F. Theodore Walton is on his way back from England with a quarter of a million of dollars that he has won on horse races, Harry MacDona has got back from an unavailing search after the north pole, in the United States ship Alliance, the opera is booming, your correspondent is in bad health too; and in these facts must the foundation of this letter rest.

Speaking about getting married reminds me that the sensation of the day in this line has been the marriage of Elie Charlier's daughter, against her father's will and protest. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Morgan L. Dix, son of John A. Dix, who used to be governor and became famous by saying if anybody hauls down the American flag shoot him on the spot. The son who preaches is the rector of Trinity, the sweetest church and congregation in New York. As a preacher he is a very nice sort of fellow, without much strength of thought, but an eminently proper conception of everything appertaining to the services he conducts. It was he who was the victim of Gentleman Joe's caprice and mischief. Joe wrote letters in other people's names, making appointments asking others to call. Mr. Dix was very unhappy. Nine months afterward they dug a rude grave in the quarries back of Sing Sing prison, and there carried the body of a man whose figure was wasted to nothing, and whose face, even in death, was marked by the lines of long suffering and pain. It was gentleman Joe's body, and it was brought there as the last incident in the persecution of the victim.

There has been such a wall about high prices of market articles that the figures have begun to fall.

Grace Cortland, the "Wall street witch" and the woman who exposed Dr. Bliss' Wall street operations during the president's illness, has gone to lecturing and speaks at Chickering hall to-night.

Rhea, the latest importation of a star actress, is a moderate success.

Frank Bangs contemplates a starring tour through the south; so does George H. McCullough; the most successful actor that ever played in New York; Salvini not expected; Rossi has gone in a southerly direction. I have written and sold a new play to Frank Evans—subject: "Salt Water Fish."

ROSS RAYMOND.

commodate five or six passengers only. It consists of a deck, high out of water, supported by a framework resting on the axis of the hollow spheres of steel six feet in diameter. These spheres revolve by the direct action of a small steam engine and serve as wheels on which the marine carriage travels. They are buoyant enough to keep the deck away from any contact with the water, and by their revolutions they carry the craft over instead of through the water. Each sphere is fitted out with flanges that act as the sand on a slippery railroad track in preventing slippage, and a result motion is accomplished with the minimum of friction.

The machine has lain for some weeks in the Harlem river, where it was built and where its trial trips were made, and has attracted much attention from ship builders and sailors, the most of whom, first, ridicule, then disbelief, and finally acknowledge that it is the embodiment of a radically new idea which will probably prove to be a factor in all future naval architecture. This week, however, an entirely new experiment was made with it which has excited wide comment. It was desirable to remove the model to the Hudson river, and in the process, where a boat with 24-foot spheres is in process of construction, and she was driven by her own power up the Harlem river, across land to the Hudson, and up the Hudson to the city, proving, by a simple demonstration, that she could travel equally as well and almost as rapidly on the ground as on the water. Of course she is not intended for land transit, but the fact that she can walk on a road like a thing of life is proof enough of the inventor's assertion that she can walk over a sand bar or back of shore without external appliances. As every ship ever built hitherto has been a comparatively slight modification of the primitive dugout raft, the merit of boldness and originality in Mr. Fryer's invention is certainly undeniable.

As just said, James Gordon Bennett has gone back to Europe. He sailed last Saturday, and just before leaving continued the fear entertained for his authority by his editorial staff by sending two of its able editors to the city department to do work as space reporters, to write about small fires, police cases, street car collisions and so on. Oh, he made it hot for them, and the reasonable wonder is why do they stand it. They do, though, and thus is the autocracy of the establishment maintained so far as they are concerned.

It is being considered now to build a tunnel under Broadway for purpose of rapid transit. It is being resisted, of course, as every new idea is. It does seem to me that the elevated railroads are the very acme of comfort in movement, and the tunnels, such as they have in London, are a fraud for comfort.

Ma Cyrus W. Field is making a move toward redeeming, for the best purposes of business, a part of the battery front. He will erect a magnificent new building on the site of the old emigrant hotel, and while it will be a place for business offices it will be that habit of the Evening Mail. The Mail is in luck.

The management of Patti's concert has been changed, and now we hear her if we want to for $3 a ticket, and we think it plenty.

The service of the United States post-office is irrevocable. A letter addressed to me at New York followed me for nine days, with the same persistence that a deputy sheriff would bring a judgment.

There has been such a wall about high prices of market articles that the figures have begun to fall.

Grace Cortland, the "Wall street witch" and the woman who exposed Dr. Bliss' Wall street operations during the president's illness, has gone to lecturing and speaks at Chickering hall to-night.

Rhea, the latest importation of a star actress, is a moderate success.

Frank Bangs contemplates a starring tour through the south; so does George H. McCullough; the most successful actor that ever played in New York; Salvini not expected; Rossi has gone in a southerly direction. I have written and sold a new play to Frank Evans—subject: "Salt Water Fish."

ROSS RAYMOND.

BILL ARP'S LETTER.

He Visits the Exposition and Permees the Exhibits. Written for The Constitution.

"All hail to the chief." We used to sing that song to Henry Clay and John C. Calhoun in the halcyon days of peace, and next to Jeff Davis and General Lee in the rip roaring times of war. But it's all played out now, and we have nobody to sing to. We have got no chief, and so far as I am concerned we don't want any. Bob Toombs has retired, Alek Stephens is serenely waiting for the summons, Ben Hill has seen his best days, and Joe Brown is on the down grade. There seems to be no new crop coming to the front to take the places of the old men of the old time. Well, maybe we don't need that—what is to say we don't need great statesmen nowadays, for all the questions of government are settled and agreed on. This is an age of business now, and not of theories. It's work, work, all the time. If a man has any doubt about it, let him go to the exposition. He will see more work done there in one day than he will see at home in a lifetime. The exposition is an index of the times—of the age we live in, and it is the biggest show I ever saw.

I may say Mr. Kimball describes all the work of it, but my opinion is that Mr. Kimball never conceived the half of it. It has just grown up, and kept growing, and made itself, until Mr. Kimball is astonished, and everybody else is. But Mr. Kimball is a great man. He has great ideas, and executes them. He reminds me of George Train's speech at Chicago, when he said he wanted the government to issue a hundred thousand millions of paper currency, so that everybody would have a pocket full and then we would build railroads and canals and fine churches and hotels and everybody be happy. Some fellow rose up and asked Train if there wouldn't be a big inflation, and Mr. Kimball said, "Of course, there would," said he "but the railroads and canals and churches and hotels wouldn't collapse. They would all be there. And, jess, Mr. Kimball will get up big things and when the collapse comes, the big things stand fast, money or no money, for there is the opera house and the Kimball house. The exposition is a success. I don't know whether it will pay out or not, but it is a success. It is the best school and the best show in the land. Every man and his wife and his children ought to go. If all can't go then some of the family ought to go and come back and tell the rest all about it. It beats all the schools in the land for instruction for the time you are there. It beats a circus for amusement. I saw Mr. Jim Camp, of Floyd county, a tip-top farmer, and he told me he had been there several days, and he said he learned just like boys go to school, and he said he had learned more in those few days than he would have done in five years by staying at home. It is a school of applied science—you see how things are done. I saw some little show of esthetics, but not much, just enough to spice the concert, which is all right. Mr. Moser has got a good lot of it in the Judges' hall. It is a splendid picture—that large one over the stage. Mr. Jaccard showed us his diamonds worth ten thousand dollars, and I told him to put 'em in my hand, but he made me turn my hand over and put 'em on the back thereof, which I didn't like, for it was a reflection on my hand. I should like to see a man steal anything on the back of his hand. I didn't care anything about the diamonds, no how. We couldn't eat 'em nor drink 'em. They can't work nor do anything. If there is anything in this world that I have a supreme contempt for, it is diamonds. I know folks who look up their genuine diamonds in their trunks and wear paste diamonds on the street. Mr. Jaccard told me that there wasn't one man in ten thousand that could tell the difference between the paste and the genuine. I was a thinking about diamonds and what they were good for, and a man told me that in these times there was a war they were good things to hide in one's clothes and run the blockade. Jesso, jesso, I like diamonds during a war. As for their beauty and brilliancy, I have seen the best drops shine on a May morning more brilliant than diamonds, and they never cost a cent. But the exposition is a big thing and I wish everybody could go to it. There will not be such an opportunity perhaps for twenty-five years. I saw some things made that we use in every-day life. I paid my money at the gate and I got the worth of it, and I am going again, and take Mrs. Arrp and the children so that we will have something to talk about all the winter. I saw some things made that we use in every-day life. I paid my money at the gate and I got the worth of it, and I am going again, and take Mrs. Arrp and the children so that we will have something to talk about all the winter. He is always drinking in knowledge. He ain't much of an original genius, but he is the greatest absorber I ever knew. He is a regular sponge. BILL ARP.

The Postage, Wis., Columbia County Weeker reports that Mr. George Fittie, of Wyeona, was cured of a severe case of rheumatism by two bottles of St. Jacobs Oil; that H. Linoleum Floor Cloth

This extraordinary floor covering is made of the most lasting materials—mainly cork and solidified oil. It has been before the public for several years, and has successfully stood tests such as no oil-cloth or carpet could undergo. It is unhesitatingly recommended as the handsomest, most durable and comfortable floor covering before the public, and is equally suitable for the dining-room, offices, stores, etc., in fact, almost every place where an article of this kind is needed. Every square yard of the cloth has "Linoleum" printed on the back; none other is genuine. All carpet dealers keep it.

Seekers After Health. Enquirer.

Unfortunately, many are seeking to renew their health, and many are often lured by the deceivingly advertised worthless compounds, that many are discouraged, and refuse to believe anything they read in the papers. Therefore, the best advertisement of a really good medicine is its reputation it has gained in places where it is being sold. No other remedy ever discovered has grown so rapidly in public favor as that true medicinal tonic called Brown's Iron Bitters. In localities where its extraordinary merits have become fully known and realized by those who have been in ill-health, the sale is unprecedented. One druggist in our city reports the sale of 238 bottles in one week. It is, indeed, a wonderful, health-giving, life-saving preparation. It is soothing and refreshing in its effect, and strengthens every part of the body, and creates healthy appetite and digestion, even when the system is almost destroyed by the many hurtful cathartics so commonly used. Beware! Duty demands that you try Brown's Iron Bitters, if your health is poor from any cause. nov20 d1w t

The Reason Why.

The tonic effect of Kidney-Wort is produced by its cleansing and purifying action on the blood. Where there is a gravelly deposit in the urinary or urinary,ropy urine from diseased kidneys, it cures without fail. Constipation and piles readily yield to its cathartic and healing power. Put up in dry vegetable form or liquid (very concentrated), either act prompt and sure.—Troy Budget.

KIDNEY WORT

DOES WONDERFUL WHY? CURES! Because it acts on the LIVER, BOWELS and KIDNEYS at the same time.

Because it cleanses the system of the poisonous humors that develop in Kidney and Urinary Diseases, Biliousness, Jaundice, Constipation, Piles, or in Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Nervous Disorders and Female Complaints.

SEE WHAT PEOPLE SAY: Eugene K. Stork, of Junction City, Kansas, says: "Kidney-Wort cured him after regular Physicians failed. He was cured of Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all the troubles of the system."

Anna L. J. J. of New York, N.Y., says: "I was cured of Kidney trouble by Kidney-Wort. I was cured of Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all the troubles of the system."

GRAND SPECIAL DAY —AT THE— INTERNATIONAL COTTON EXPOSITION!

BY SPECIAL ORDER the executive committee, to meet a demand, urged from many quarters, has set apart Thursday, November 24th, as a day particularly devoted to the visits of the students of colleges and pupils of schools, and of persons who are engaged in the various industrial and manufacturing establishments of this and neighboring states. The exposition has more the title of a GREAT TECHNICAL SCHOOL, and should be visited and studied by every mechanic and artisan engaged in the workshops and factories of the country. It is calculated in a remarkable degree to stimulate the studies, inform the minds and excite the ambitions of the young people now pursuing their studies in our institutions of learning.

Every Parent, Teacher and Employer should unite with the management of the exposition in signaling this special occasion by an immense attendance of those for whose benefit and pleasure it has been set apart.

THE FOLLOWING REGULATIONS WILL CONTROL THE admission of employees and pupils of schools:

1. The admission fee will be for such pupils and employees, 25 CENTS EACH!

2. The beneficiaries of the day will be admitted at the reduced rates only when presenting themselves in parties of ten or more.

3. Presidents of colleges and principals of schools, where they are not able to accompany their pupils in person, or to send a teacher with them, are requested to designate some one of the party as the leader, and furnish such leader with a certificate of the fact.

4. Employers of persons engaged in manufacturing and desiring to attend on this day will also furnish to the leaders of parties certificates of that fact.

5. There will be special admission gates for those entering under this rule, and the leader of each party will have the full amount, at 25 cents each, ready to hand the gate-man to save delay.

Every facility will be afforded for seeing the entire exhibition easily and in order.

PRESS OPINIONS

ON THE INTERNATIONAL COTTON EXPOSITION.

The Agricultural Pursuits of the South Considered—Small Farms Taking the Place of Broad Acres The Manufacture of the Staple Near at Home.

Atlanta Messenger.

Another fact taught by the exposition, which cannot fail to impress itself upon the minds of all sections is that sectional animosities are becoming extinct. While the exhibits of our own section are large and creditable, the most casual observer can but notice that the vast majority of the exhibits are from the north and northwest. No higher evidence could be produced that the era of sectional strife has passed, and that our people of all sections are commingling in free and friendly intercourse, both in business and social relations. This is in spite of peevish politicians whose occupations will be gone when the northern masses can no longer be rallied under the bloody shirt, and southern hot heads can no longer be led by appeals to passion and hate. Apart from the intrinsic value of the exposition to the country at large, it is well worth visiting merely for the sake of the pleasure it affords in examining the many novel and beautiful exhibits. Scarcely any taste would fail to find much to please and interest, so varied and extensive are the exhibits. The visitor can interest himself in observing the manufacture of the finest paper box by hand, or the manufacture of six thousand spools of cotton thread by a single machine in a day.

We think a great mistake was made in the manner of displaying the Georgia exhibits. There are so scattered as to lose much of the effect they could otherwise have. Every one is struck with the displays of Kansas and Texas, simply because they are collected and exhibited in most striking and striking manner. Twenty people would observe specially these displays where one would observe the display of Georgia. Yet Georgia has the most beautiful and grandest exhibit, divided into several distinct parts and even in different houses. For instance, the south Georgia display, which is the best Georgia has apart from minerals, is in one building; the State road exhibit, which is the finest display of minerals and road to be seen in another building; the exhibits of Commissioner Henderson are in a different part of the building, while many smaller exhibits and the fine exhibit of Mr. Jones are in still different places. But, be this as it may, Georgia has demonstrated, in spite of the want of an appropriate building, that she possesses resources which, when fully developed and utilized, will make her, in wealth, an empire within herself.

Washington Post.

It is the credit system which has, perhaps, worked more disastrously than any other policy that is peculiar to the south. It is a planter's mortgage on prospective cotton crop to a merchant, in security for the payment of his provision bill, incurred during the year. Under its operation the planter can buy only at one place and can sell his cotton to only one man. He pays from thirty to forty per cent more for what he buys and gets less for what he sells. Hence, it not infrequently happens that after a hard year's work, the planter is no better off than at the beginning of the year. The value of his cotton has been eaten up and worn out by the time it is delivered. Whatever profit there may have been in his venture has been sacrificed to the pocket of his factor. But this difficulty is not insuperable. Capital is coming to the planter's rescue. Already a banking firm with a capital of $2,000,000 is established in Atlanta, whose business is almost exclusively done with cotton planters. It loans on mortgage on cotton real estate at a rate varying from seven to nine per cent, which gives the planter an advantage of from twenty to thirty per cent over the credit system, besides leaving him free to dispose of his cotton when and where he wishes, and to receive the full market value for it. The loaning business will have abundance of reinforcement from the north, where money is a drug at five per cent on good security.

Chattanooga Tradesman.

The advantage possessed by the south in the manufacture of cotton yarns and goods is too plain not to be recognized by every intelligent person. That the place where cotton grows is the place where it can be best manufactured is a fact which no man who understands business principles will venture to controvert. Cotton is no exception to the general rule. Instead the metals, the smelting and the mining where ore and coal are obtained. The advantage of the south over the north in the cotton mill business is estimated by experienced men at twenty per cent. Southern working people take well to the mill labor, becoming proficient in the business in a short time. When the cotton is obtained on the spot, clean from the gin and undamaged by compressing, the expense of preparing it for the loom is comparatively light, and the necessary operations require but little outside machinery, which advantages are highly prized by manufacturers. The expenses for freight are greatly in favor of the south, and thereby affecting adding much to the profits. Besides, goods which are made from the fresh, clean, uncompressed staple possess a superiority that sells favorably in the market.

New York Times.

Of the great middle class of farmers in Georgia, 50 per cent are owners of the soil they till. Even the farms between fifty and one hundred acres, only 45 per cent are in the hands of tenants. Certainly, this does not look as if the soil of the south were passing into the possession of a class of landed proprietors, to be held in the hands of a few. The risk system is evidently not going to prevail there. Present indications point rather to the formation of a class of farmers, who will be able to manage their own land, from the nature of their crop, and the country, owning more land. This would be the most satisfactory and profitable condition of the soil. Ownership of the soil makes men thrifty and conservative if anything can do it. For six or seven years the south has been working out its own system of free labor. This period is long enough to determine the permanence and direction of the forces that are operating. The tendency has been toward the creation of an agricultural community, much different from that of the north. Any southern planter, white or black, with brains and industry may own his land, instead of leasing it, to a class of tenants, who, in many cases, have been land owners, in spite of unfavorable conditions, is a sufficient proof that brains and industry are not wanting in that section.

Tuskegee, Ala., News.

The Atlanta exposition is now thoroughly under way, and is a great success. The cotton manufacturers of New England are not to be there this week. There is no doubt that their effect on the minds of the northern people will be salutary, in removing the prejudices that have warped their judgment of the south and its people, since the Atlanta seems to be in the lead. From a population of 9,500 in 1860, reduced to almost nothing in 1865 by the civil war, it has grown to be a thriving city of 15,000 inhabitants, has eight railroads centering there, and is called in name, which it appears to the writer it might be called in reality, the Chicago of the south.

THE COLUMBIA SEMINARY.

The Presbyterians Reviving an Important Institution—Semi-Centennial Anniversary, Etc.

Editors CONSTITUTION.—Many of your readers will naturally be interested in the ceremonies by which was celebrated the fifty anniversary of the Presbyterian theological seminary at Columbia, and also of the venerable Dr. Howe's connection with it. The occasion the only show of progress in the church but in the country. Through the courtesy of Major Houston excursion tickets were issued over the "Air-Line," and quite a party availed themselves of it, among whom I might mention Dr. Fraser, of Decatur; Dr. Buttolph, of Marietta; Dr. Smith, of New Orleans, and Rev. Mr. Green and wife, of Kentucky. Dr. Alder, of South Carolina, joined the party, and Dr. John Rice had preceded us. The tidings of the long drive was whirled away in social talk, and we were rather surprised when, the evening shadows found us entering the once beautiful capital of South Carolina.

The synod of South Carolina has so timed its annual session as to be present. Its business was promptly finished, and on Friday, November 18, a great company gathered in the Presbyterian church to witness the organization of a alumni association, and the presentation of the venerable Prof. Howe, under whom so many hundreds of ministers have received their training. Dr. Palmer, of New Orleans, as chairman of the committee of arrangements, called the meeting to order, and on his motion Dr. Axson, of Savannah, was made chairman pro tem. The address of welcome to the alumni and their friends was delivered by Dr. Palmer. In his own laudable style Dr. Palmer, president; Dr. Girardeau, vice-president; Dr. Mack, treasurer; and Rev. Thomas H. Lee, secretary.

Letters were read from all the Presbyterian ministers in the United States—Union seminary, Virginia; Princeton, New Jersey; Union, New York; Auburn, New York; Danville, Kentucky; Chicago, Illinois; Pennsylvania, and San Francisco, expressing their good wishes at the prospect of reviving a school of theology, so important to religion, and speaking in the warmest manner of Dr. Howe, a patient worth and services. The letter from New York was the only one upon the curious coincidence that the only other instance of a professor holding his position for 50 years, known in America, is that of the famous Dr. Charles Hodge, of Princeton.

The ceremonies of the evening were conducted by an address to Dr. Howe made, in the name of all the rest, by the Rev. James H. Sayre, one of the early graduates, now a venerable man of 74 years. To this the doctor responded feelingly, alluding to the providential circumstances by which he was led from his native New England to seek health in a milder climate—of the confidence and kindness extended to him by the hospitable people of the south—and of the call to teach in the seminary by which all his plans for life were changed.

On the next morning after some preliminary business, the alumni and their friends gathered in the church to enjoy a literary feast. Prof. Thomas E. Peck, of our seminary in Virginia, read a paper on "Presbyterianism." Many will remember it as long as they live, and learned judges pronounced it one of the ablest essays on that topic which they had ever heard or read. Then came Dr. Howe's historical sketch of the seminary—its development from very humble beginnings and its changing fortunes. By this time we were quite ready to recede from business and take our dinner, for we had sat for four hours.

But a half-past three the company had again assembled to hear brief memoirs of the five deceased professors read. That of the first professor, Dr. Thomas R. Gouding, derived its interest from the fact that it was the last work upon which the gifted pen of his son, Dr. Francis Gouding, of Lowell, Mass., was employed. Indeed, the paper had fallen from his hand ere the last sentences had been written. The work of love was completed and the paper read by Dr. Buttolph.

The next memoir was read by our fellow townsman, Dr. Jones. It gave a delightful sketch of the life and labors of his accomplished kinsman, Dr. Charles C. Jones, of Liberty county, who, after filling a chair with distinguished ability, forsook the society of the learned, that he might return to his loved work of preaching the gospel to the negroes of southwestern Georgia. Every heart in the assembly was touched by the noble self-sacrifice of the great preacher.

An interesting sketch of Dr. Leland from the pen of Dr. Broadwell, of Mississippi, was read by Dr. Girardeau. The memoir of Dr. Thorneill, by his friend, Dr. Alder, was received with profound interest. And the services of two and a half hours were brought to a close by an eloquent tribute to Dr. Palmer, prepared for the occasion by Dr. Howe, of Richmond, Va. Portraits of these eminent professors had been tastefully displayed around and upon the pulpit, and we went away feeling that we had drawn very near to the great and good men by whose labors we had been blessed.

On Sunday morning the church was packed to its utmost capacity to hear a sermon from Dr. Palmer, who was the beloved pastor of this congregation before his removal to New Orleans. The great preacher was fully equal to the occasion, delighting and edifying his hearers by a luminous presentation of the wonders of redemption.

In the afternoon Dr. Sullivan, of Alabama, preached by appointment to the alumni on the duties of the pastoral office.

At night the venerable Dr. Wilson, of Baltimore, read a brief sketch of twenty-one years of his life and labors of his accomplished kinsman, Dr. Robert Smith, of China, gave some account of his labors in that distant land.

On Monday morning Professor Girardeau read an able discussion on "The Federal Theology—Its Import and Influence." To many who had sat at the feet of the great teacher, Dr. Thorneill, it seemed that the spirit of the master survives in the pupil, and the alumni resolved by a "rising vote" to urge him to complete the system of theology which Dr. Thorneill left unfinished, when death laid its arrest upon him.

But the day's instruction was not yet over, and at 7:30 we again met to hear an elaborate paper by Dr. Smith, of New Orleans, on "Biblical Criticism," in which some of the improved assertions and vicious methods were exposed that have vexed Professor Robertson Smith against the faith of Christendom, and have caused his name to be erased from the Presbyterian ministry in Scotland.

At night the alumni met without a formal program, and the time was devoted to firewords and speeches in which the pathetic and the humorous were mingled. Reminiscences of the old school days were given, the joke being sometimes turned upon the professor and sometimes upon the student. The hours sped swiftly by and the midnight chime had struck before we had reached our lodgings. The exercises of the semi-centennial were unanimously voted a great success, and the graduates—nearly one hundred in number—were present—will go back to their homes with their love to their alma mater revived. Dr. Palmer, to whom we are indebted for the first suggestion of this union, as well as for its great success, expressed himself as being gratified beyond all measure at the success. Another equally eminent graduate said: "Taking it all in all the social and intellectual together, I consider the meeting a great success. Indeed, in point of ability, it has surpassed all similar gatherings that I have ever attended." A third, well known for his judiciousness and sobriety of speech was heard to remark that he considered the papers read fully equal to the ablest which he had called out by the Pan-Presbyterian council at Philadelphia, of which he was a member. To the last remark I subscribe heartily; for, in fact, the exercises at Columbia were far more complete and satisfactory, not having been absurdly limited to thirty minutes, in order to make room for some eager and impatient success.

At least two permanent results, likely to prove of great value, have been reached by the reunion at Columbia. An alumni association has been formed, which we hope will develop into a social and literary support to the seminary, and the publication of a volume has been ordered, in which all the papers, scientific, historical and biographical shall be preserved, together with brief memoirs of about 120 graduates, and a list of names, and waiting under the old trees which had refreshed them with their shade thirty or forty years ago. And the step has been taken which will lead to the publication of a "Theology of Prayer."

The social features of the reunion were delightful, and many a fond memory was revived. The old ties which had refreshed them with their shade thirty or forty years ago. And the step has been taken which will lead to the publication of a "Theology of Prayer."

P. S.—I ought to have said that when the board of directors, which had been in session at intervals during the celebration, that the duties of the seminary will certainly be improved. Providence permitting, September 14th, 1882, the alumni-greeted the venerable declaration with hearty applause. Dr. Mack, our financial agent, is greatly cheered by the response of the people to calls for money; and he says that no community has done better than the Presbyterians of Atlanta, who have pledged more than $4,000, and will, doubtless, do better still.

STARNES & STARNES, Attorneys and Counselors at Law,

Life and Labors of his accomplished kinsman, Dr.

Charles C. Jones, of Liberty county, who, after filling a chair with distinguished ability, forsook the society of the learned, that he might return to his loved work of preaching the gospel to the negroes of southwestern Georgia. Every heart in the assembly was touched by the noble self-sacrifice of the great preacher.

An interesting sketch of Dr. Leland from the pen of Dr. Broadwell, of Mississippi, was read by Dr.

Girardeau. The memoir of Dr. Thorneill, by his friend, Dr. Alder, was received with profound interest. And the services of two and a half hours were brought to a close by an eloquent tribute to Dr. Palmer, prepared for the occasion by Dr. Howe, of Richmond, Va. Portraits of these eminent professors had been tastefully displayed around and upon the pulpit, and we went away feeling that we had drawn very near to the great and good men by whose labors we had been blessed.

On Sunday morning the church was packed to its utmost capacity to hear a sermon from Dr. Palmer, who was the beloved pastor of this congregation before his removal to New Orleans. The great preacher was fully equal to the occasion, delighting and edifying his hearers by a luminous presentation of the wonders of redemption.

In the afternoon Dr. Sullivan, of Alabama, preached by appointment to the alumni on the duties of the pastoral office.

At night the venerable Dr. Wilson, of Baltimore, read a brief sketch of twenty-one years of his life and labors of his accomplished kinsman, Dr.

Robert Smith, of China, gave some account of his labors in that distant land.

On Monday morning Professor Girardeau read an able discussion on "The Federal Theology—Its Import and Influence." To many who had sat at the feet of the great teacher, Dr. Thorneill, it seemed that the spirit of the master survives in the pupil, and the alumni resolved by a "rising vote"

to urge him to complete the system of theology which Dr. Thorneill left unfinished, when death laid its arrest upon him.

But the day's instruction was not yet over, and at 7:30 we again met to hear an elaborate paper by Dr. Smith, of New Orleans, on "Biblical Criticism," in which some of the improved assertions and vicious methods were exposed that have vexed Professor Robertson Smith against the faith of Christendom, and have caused his name to be erased from the Presbyterian ministry in Scotland.

At night the alumni met without a formal program, and the time was devoted to firewords and speeches in which the pathetic and the humorous were mingled. Reminiscences of the old school days were given, the joke being sometimes turned upon the professor and sometimes upon the student. The hours sped swiftly by and the midnight chime had struck before we had reached our lodgings. The exercises of the semi-centennial were unanimously voted a great success, and the graduates—nearly one hundred in number—were present—will go back to their homes with their love to their alma mater revived. Dr. Palmer, to whom we are indebted for the first suggestion of this union, as well as for its great success, expressed himself as being gratified beyond all measure at the success.

Another equally eminent graduate said: "Taking it all in all the social and intellectual together,

I consider the meeting a great success. Indeed, in point of ability, it has surpassed all similar gatherings that I have ever attended." A third,

well known for his judiciousness and sobriety of speech was heard to remark that he considered the papers read fully equal to the ablest which he had called out by the Pan-Presbyterian council at Philadelphia, of which he was a member. To the last remark I subscribe heartily; for, in fact, the exercises at Columbia were far more complete and satisfactory, not having been absurdly limited to thirty minutes, in order to make room for some eager and impatient success.

At least two permanent results, likely to prove of great value, have been reached by the reunion at Columbia. An alumni association has been formed, which we hope will develop into a social and literary support to the seminary, and the publication of a volume has been ordered, in which all the papers, scientific, historical and biographical shall be preserved, together with brief memoirs of about 120 graduates, and a list
